DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-10 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1, 3, 5 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Smith et al. (US 6,536,428).

The applied reference has a common inventor/assignee with the instant application.

Based upon the earlier effective U.S. filing date of the reference, it constitutes prior art under 35 U.S.C. 102(e). This rejection under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) might be overcome either by a showing under 37 CFR 1.132 that any invention disclosed but not claimed in the reference was derived from the inventor of this application and is thus not the invention "by another," or by an appropriate showing under 37 CFR 1.131.

4. As to claim 1, Smith teaches an apparatus that comprises a flexible conduit comprising an inlet, an outlet, an enclosing outer wall defining a flexible gas passageway between the inlet and the outlet such that respiratory gases flow through the inlet into the flexible gases passageway and through the outlet (see figure 2; col. 3 lines 25-45), at least a region of the enclosing outer wall being of material that allows the passage of water vapor without allowing the passage of liquid water or respiratory gases through the enclosure outer wall (see col. 4 lines 20-30), the at least a region and the outlet are separate from each other (see figure 2), and a heater wire 12 associated with the passageway, wherein the flexible conduit is of a type suitable for conveying respiratory gases to or from a patient (see figure 2; col. 3 lines 60-67 and col. 4 lines 1-28).

5. As to claim 3, Smith teaches an apparatus wherein the heater wire lies freely within the passageway, such that the heater wire settles over at least some of its length at low points in the passageway where condensed water vapor may collect (see col. 3 lines 4—50).

6. As to claims 5 and 6, Smith teaches an apparatus that comprises an inner conduit, having the inlet, the outlet and the enclosing outer wall, an outer conduit, having a second inlet and a second outlet, the inner conduit located within the outer conduit, the inlet of the inner conduit and the second outlet of the outer conduit being located at a first end of the flexible conduit, and the outlet of the inner conduit and the second inlet of the outer conduit being located at a second end of the flexible conduit, and the heater wire is located in a space between the inner conduit and the outer conduit (see figure 2).

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 2, 4 and 7-10 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. The prior art does not teach the conduit being an expiratory limb and the heater wire being located in an expiratory flow path of the expiratory limb.
